“ Yesterday, I was watching TV and being bored at the same time I was playing with my smartphone and Kerry's name came to mind. Now, I don't often think about her these days, because I haven't seen or heard from her in years. You see, Kerry was my first (adult) girlfriend I ever had. I met Kerry (McKillop at that time) at a dance nightclub when I was on leave from the US Army. I was an Army Specialist (E-4) during the first gulf war. Kerry and I hit it off, and she even visited me when I was stationed at Ft. Lewis, Washington. Kerry was very soft spoken, but every now and then got her Irish up when angered. Unfortunately, I was a very young, and a very stupid soldier, and took Kerry for granted, and ended up loosing her in the end. Kerry had an infectious smile that I'll miss. Kerry will always be part of my life which I am reminded of every time I'm asked a security question from my bank. The question is: "Who was your first girlfriend"?

I still don't know how Kerry passed on, but I remember that Kerry was a insulin dependant diabetic and that scared me, but to Kerry it was just a matter of course. Now, how ironic, I am to a diabetic too, but not insulin dependant.

My deepest sympathy and condolences to Kerry's spouse, her children and her immediate family and friends.

If someone can tell me how she passed on, I would be very grateful. I will leave my E-mail address for this purpose.

With deepest sorrow,
Robert Napper. (robertnapper@comcast.net)

“ To the McKillop & Gillespie families,
My heart is saddened to learn of Kerry's passing. While it has been a few years since I had last been in touch with her, it doesn't lessen the blow of her passing for me. I met Kerry in 7th grade, and we spent a lot of time together all through junior high & high school. My deepest sympathy to you all. May she rest in peace. Michelle (Stoppa) Porchia
